2010 marked the first year that DFI sought to expand its reach by providing financing for six projects, incorporating unique methods of storytelling. Films such as “Grandma, A Thousand Times” and “Hawi” are among the first projects to receive a DFI MENA Film Grant, and have gone on to win awards at international festivals. In 2011, more than 250 applications were submitted, of which 52 were selected for their dynamism in storytelling, the uniqueness of the subject matter, and the breadth of the projects’ ability to engage local and international audiences.

The ethos behind the DFI Mena Grants is developing a culture where filmmakers can cultivate and refine their narratives while being supported throughout the entire creative lifecycle of their projects. By showcasing participants work through various initiatives, including financing and networking programmes, these foundations help secure a vibrant Arab presence within contemporary cinema.

This initiative provides resources at the diverse phases of film creation, including Development, Production, Post-production and Prints and Advertising. Feature narratives, documentaries, shorts, and experimental films are among the diverse stories that are part of this year’s initiative, which will enable filmmakers to secure the tools required to develop and perpetuate engaging storytelling at festivals around the world.

Assisting in the development of a dynamic filmmaking community also ensures that ideas, scripts, and storyboards are taken from the page and transformed into images on the screen. DTFF 2011 marks the launch of Doha Projects, a DFI initiative that is fully dedicated to supporting all facets of filmmaking and maximising the reach and potential of funded projects, by bridging artists, resources and industry knowledge.

As DFI’s global footprint continues to expand, it offers more opportunities for filmmakers to reach larger audiences and join a growing portfolio of successful projects. Doha Projects and MENA Film Grants directly reflects DFI’s objective of transforming Qatar into a cultural hub through which, the next generation of storytellers can refine their craft. From financing to mentorship, these elements are creating the architecture of a holistic support network; one which will assist participants in all aspects of project development and ensure local and regional voices to continue to be heard.

“Lust” takes us into a marginalised street in Alexandria and the lives of its residents. Umm Shooq is a woman whose feelings of inadequacy drive her to gain power over the world in which she lives.

Umm Shooq has run away from her wealthy family to marry the man she loves and has settled into a life of poverty in a marginalised street in Alexandria. While in this world she sells coffee to neighbours and reads their fortunes. Desperate to pay for a life-saving operation for her son, she returns to Cairo to ask her family for money but cannot face the shame, and starts begging on the streets. Back in Alexandria, her son dies and Umm Shooq returns to Cairo as a beggar.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE
When I read the script of “El Shooq” for the first time, I felt a shiver down my spine and I was not surprised when the script was chosen by Sundance Screenwriters Lab in 2006 and MFD in 2007. The story is simple, but profound. Pure Egyptian, yet international. It is supported first, by its visual elements and second, by its sparse dialogue in which every word counts towards building mood and revealing the characters’ emotions. “El Shooq” is a social drama about Egyptian society where the story of marginalised people living on a forgotten street subtly parodies the construct of power in Egyptian society.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY
Khaled El-Hagar, born in Suez, Egypt in 1963, studied law at Cairo University. After working as an assistant director for acclaimed Director Youssef Chahine, he studied scriptwriting and film directing at the UK’s National Film & Television School, Beaconsfield. His first feature “Little Dreams” was made for the German channel ZDF and “Room to Rent” followed. Shot in the UK for Studio Canal, it received eight international awards, and was released across Europe, Canada and USA. Other features include “Stolen Kisses” and “Love of the Girls” and “Ma Fich Gheir Kida,” the first Egyptian musical since the 1940s.

COMPANY PROFILE
Founded in 1997, Crystal Films is a Lebanon based distribution and production company in partnership with Belgian distribution company Cineart. Crystal established, along with Circuit Empire, the first “Europa Cinema Theatre” in the Middle East region, a special programme launched by the European Union to promote Euro-Mediterranean films. Crystal Films has distributed some 25 feature films in the Middle East.

MY BROTHER

“Mon Frère”, Morocco, France, Qatar, 2012

After a break-up, painter Mo Bensalah throws his body and soul into his art. Constructed like a pictorial and sensorial puzzle, the film is the portrait of an artist caught between France and Morocco, set to the pulsating rhythms of Gnawa folk music.

The feature tells the story of Mo Bensalah, a Moroccan immigrant’s son in his forties. We see the essence of Mo who is an artist and painter, through his creative craft; a journey into his paintings. Mo’s internal voice and feelings guide us to the heart of his identity crisis, his personal story is revealed to us step by step as it unfolds. “My Brother” is a film about the internal struggles and complexities of being both French, Arab and Muslim in today’s society.

NORMAL

“Normal”, Algeria, France, Qatar, 2011

A new vision of today’s Algerian youth struggling with political and artistic dilemmas.

When the Arab Spring began in Tunisia and Egypt, Fouzi gathered a group of actors to show them footage of a documentary he started shooting two years ago. The subject is about the disillusionment of a youth who are seeking to express their artistic ideas. He then starts seeking for an alternative point of view of the situation, and especially another ending; the sequence of which relies on the actors reactions to the historical change that their country is witnessing. The film explores diverse questions and tensions including: what is the place of creation in Algeria today, how to create without confronting censorship, how can you resist in making films or waking to a new revolution?

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

“Normal” is a term frequently used by Algerian youth. It is the symbol of the fatalism and apathy that is affecting many Algerian youth who are leading an existence that is dull and uninspired. I started shooting this film in 2009 during the organisation of a Pan-African Festival, which struggled to succeed due to a lack of culture and the restrictions of censorship. I filmed on the fly in the streets of Algiers to tell the story of a group of young people trying to express themselves in an artistic environment. I finished in the summer of 2011, meeting my characters again and reflecting on new questions in light of the Arab revolution.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Born in Algiers, Merzak Allouache graduated from IDHEC film school in Paris in 1967. In 1976, he shot his first feature, “Omar Gatlato,” which screened in the Directors’ Fortnight sidebar of the Cannes Film Festival. Since then his many highly acclaimed films include “Un amour à Paris,” “Bab-el-Oued City” and “Salut Cousin.” In 2003 “Chouchou” became a major commercial success. His most recent feature “Harragas” was selected for the Venice Festival. It received accolades at the Festival of Valencia, Spain and at the Dubai Festival in 2010. “Normal” is his latest feature film.

COMPANY PROFILE

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

The Egyptian Revolution is an extraordinary historical moment, and I feel privileged to be a documentary filmmaker creating in this period. Documentary is the only film genre that does not distance you from people while creating a narrative. This type of filmmaking allows you to collaborate and get in touch with those who are presenting their reality alongside your input. Sameh, our sound engineer, joined the millions of Egyptians in Tahrir Square demanding the downfall of the regime. In February, he agreed to be the leading character in this film and to share his experiences and the reflections of a nation trying to establish its voice.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Born in Cairo, Tahani Rached studied at the Montreal School of Fine Arts. She started her career as a filmmaker in 1973 with “To Make A Change”. Tahani has directed some 20 films throughout her career, 11 of those during her time with the National Film Board of Canada. These include “Beirut! Not Enough Death to Go Round” (1983), “Au chic resto pop” (1990), “Four Women of Egypt” (1997) and “Soraida, A Woman of Palestine” (2004). In 2005, she returned to Egypt and filmed “These Girls”, following this in 2007 with “Giran” (Neighbours).

COMPANY PROFILE

Studio Masr has been on the forefront of Arab cinema since 1935. Today it is the only film studio in Africa and the Middle East capable of servicing the industry at all phases, and in adherence to the highest international standards.

When I got my first period, my mother kissed me and said with a smile: “Now you are a woman. You must care about your behaviour and movements.” I did not understand what she meant until she forbade me from riding my beloved bicycle. The film brings together Damascene women from differing social and religious backgrounds, each woman shares secrets and recalls incidents connected to their awakening sexual consciousness and the limitation of their existence and desires. “Yearning” explores a woman’s place in a male society and how it affects her womanhood and the relationship to her own body.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I decided to make a documentary about the role of women and level of freedom they have in a male-dominated society, and how it reflects on their sexual consciousness and relationship to their body. To have the courage to fight to make decisions about your own life is difficult but with much change occurring in Arab countries, we can build the foundations for a better and healthier society. I believe that when we have democracy in our country, women will be brave enough to ensure a better life for their daughters.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

WHAT’S YOUR STORY? PART I

“Sho Qostak - Part I”, Palestine, Qatar, 2011

The film “Sho Qostak” - Part I is the first part of a trilogy. It is a reflection from the perspective of an Arab Palestinian Israeli citizen who travels across the country and watches the stories and images of the people and spaces he encounters.

Jamal, a Palestinian citizen of Israel, meets five young Israelis with different ideological perspectives. Through conversations about different topics, they define their identity and express how they see themselves. Furthermore, they explore their identities at a deeper level than the simplistic image of the Israeli as an executioner, and attempt to find the person within the political persona. From this point their discussion moves to ways of giving space for the ‘other’ to exist without delegitimising their own existence.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Films about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict tend to be simplistic, leaving a complicated reality unexplored. The biggest challenge for a victimiser is to confront the guilt that accompanies a massive loss of life. My curiosity – and what I believe is haunting in the film – is to see interviewees twist and turn in their chairs trying to rephrase events while justifying their people’s actions. I tried to be as compelling as I could, listening to my enemies tell their version of the story, thus revealing the paradox in which they live.

DIRECTORS’ BIOGRAPHY

Jamal Khalaile was born in Akko in 1976. He graduated with a Cinema and Television degree from Jerusalem where he studied Directing and Producing. In 2006, he led video workshops at the Jerusalem cinematheque. Khalaile served as location manager for filmmakers Elia Suleiman (“The Time That Remains”), Tawfik Abu Wael (“Tanathur”), Sameh Zoabi (“Man Without Cellphone”), Hiam Abbas (“Inheritance”) and was Editor of the feature film “Bena”, directed by Niv Klainer. He is currently working as a freelance director, editor, location manager and producer.

Pauline Carbonnier was born in France. Author of numerous documentary films, she wrote and co-directed “Sho Qostak - Part I”, with Jamal Khalaile. She is currently co-writing the second part of the trilogy and her first feature film.

COMPANY PROFILE

Baher Agbariya has produced several short fiction and feature documentary films as well as being the co-producer on the fiction film “Atash.” Additionally, he has worked as a line producer on several Palestinian and international feature productions: “Paradise Now,” directed by Hani Abu Assad; “Tanathur,” directed by Tawfik Abu Wael; and “Man Without a Cellphone” directed by Sameh Zoabi. In 2010, he produced his first feature-length film, “Mars at Sunrise,” directed by Jessica Habbie.

FEBRUARY 19

“February 19”, Armenia, Lebanon, Qatar

A train ride between Yerevan and Tbilisi. Anna and Alex are separated by a wall; a cold, white wall.

It is February 19. The train will depart with Anna and Alex. Years have passed, the day has come for their last meeting. Location: the train. City: Yerevan. She is there – in the train. He enters – and the white thin wall becomes a cold white barrier between them. They will talk, shout, cry, whisper and make love. The dull thin wall remains.

FROM A CITY WITH NO IMAGES

“Min Madine Bala Souwar”, Lebanon, Qatar

Images of Beirut shot over six years are shown to a confused traveller who claims he comes from a city with no images. How should the narrator explain what images are?

Many images...

First: A woman looks at a book of pictures. She cries. “Have you seen what they did to my city?” Pictures make her cry. Can she slap the picture to hurt it the way it hurt her?

Second: A wide-angle image of Beirut being bombed in 1982. An image betrays an angle of experience that the narrator never had. In the image, the narrator stands next to a soldier in the city but, in memory, she is someone inside the buildings being bombed. The two images meet. They fight.

Third: A grandmother sits with her neighbour watching the live bombing of Beirut in 2006. How can they watch such images? Why don’t they stand and yell in horror?

And more images remain.

Shooting Format: MiniDV
Runtime: 40 min
Genre: Docufiction
Language: Arabic
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

It is through questioning my own practice of taking images that this project came about. Images can be communicators, emotional blackmailers, offenders, symbols, thieves that steal memories. It’s hard to conceive of one’s life without the exchange, duplication and fighting for or against images. It also seems unlikely for a city to be able to exist without images, which is the reason why the fictional protagonist of this film is actually the resident of a city with no images. By questioning the very essence of images, some of the masks that images take on start to become apparent.

This is the story of Mohsen, a ‘bastard’ whose origins and history are unknown. He has always been excluded and rejected by the inhabitants of the rundown district where he lives.

“Bastardo” is the story of Mohsen, ‘the bastard’, whose origins and history are unknown. He was found in a dustbin 30 years ago by Am Salah, his adoptive father, and has always been excluded and rejected by the residents of the rundown district where he lives. After being fired from his job, Mohsen, in cahoots with his friend Khlifa, places a GSM relay on his roof for a substantial monthly payment. The aerial will allow the locals to have access to mobile phones for the first time.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE
For this story, I was inspired by a house dominating a run-down area on the outskirts of Tunis. In the years preceding the writing of the script, I observed the chaotic evolution of the building that grew over the years to become an architectural freak. One day, a GSM relay was placed on top of the house and the money from this device allowed new windows, facades and tiles to revise the space. As the inhabitants’ lives were evolving, I began fantasising about the interior and the characters living inside, until one was introduced to me.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY
Born in 1972 in Tunis, Nejib Belkadhi studied Management and Marketing at the Institut des Hautes Etudes Commerciales in Carthage. His initial experience in film and theatre was as an actor, but his directing career began with Canal+ Horizons TV as the creator, director and co-presenter of “Chams Alik” from 1999 to 2001. In 2002, he founded Propaganda Production with Imed Marzouk. His first docu-fiction, “VHS-Kahloucha” (2006), was selected for 50 film festivals and has won seven awards.

COMPANY PROFILE
Propaganda Production was founded in 2002 by Imed Marzouk and Nejib Belkadhi. They produce shorts, feature films and documentaries, including “VHS Kahloucha” by Nejib (Official Selection at Cannes; Sundance Competition in the documentary section; and winner of a gold Muhr at the Dubai Film Festival in 2006). Shorts include “Tsawer” by Neji, “Condamnation et offrande” by Walid Mattar, “Linge sale” by Malik Amara, and “Mrayet” by Nadia Raies.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I will treat “Beirut Hold’em” with a sensory approach in order to capture the intangible emotions the city generates, and embody its unique atmosphere. The protagonist will often evolve in real situations in order to represent the country’s actual essence and heartbeat. The codes of the genre are manipulated and adapted to Lebanese society. Protagonists continuously gamble, which mirrors the idea of the Lebanese population gambling on its unknown destiny, and the notion of the state gambling on its own future, like a game of Russian roulette.

IBN BATTUTA

“Ibn Battuta”, Algeria, France, Lebanon, Qatar

Three people on very different journeys cross paths in Beirut despite lies, oversights, missteps, dead-ends and ever present ghosts.

While covering community clashes in southern Algeria, Ibn Battuta, a journalist, finds himself picking up the trail of forgotten uprisings against the Abbasid Caliphate. For the purpose of his investigation, he goes to Beirut allegedly to study the state of the “Arab nation”. Nahla, a young Palestinian whose family has found refuge in Greece, also heads for Beirut taking funds to other Palestinians. In US-occupied Iraq, Mr. Prince is making easy money and, seeking to preserve his loot, he too moves to Beirut. They will all meet despite a myriad of factors, tensions, missteps, dead-ends, lies, oversights, and ever present ghosts.

Amidst the teargas of the Algerian riots, rebels mention the Zanj to Algerian journalist Ibn Battuta. It pushes him on a journey across the Middle East spurred by a desire to know more about the Zanj, black slaves of the 8th and 9th Centuries who eventually staged an uprising against the Abbasid Caliphate. His journey ends at the mingling waters where the Tigris and the Euphrates join the waters of the Arab-Persian Gulf. As the journalist becomes a genealogist for long lost struggles, is he, like the Algerian rioters, expressing a need to reinvent his thinking in the face of oppression?

MOSQUI CINEMA

“Namou Cinema”, Syria, Lebanon, Qatar

Ghalia believes that she’s the reincarnation of another woman named Zeina. When Ghalia sleeps, Zeina leaves her body and walks the streets of Damascus, and there she meets Samer, a young projectionist who is passionate about film.

Ghalia believes that a girl called Zeina, who drowned in the sea the same day Ghalia was born, has inhabited her soul. Her neighbour Samer, is a projectionist at the cinema who brings films home to screen in his room. While Ghalia’s asleep, Zeina leaves her body to check on her parents after 23 years – and meets Samer. As Zeina falls in love with Samer, Ghalia is in love with her Japanese teacher and dreams of leaving for Japan. The two girls’ love stories exist in two different times simultaneously.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I am an independent filmmaker constantly struggling to make movies in a country with low production capacities. “Mosqui Cinema” pushes me to find a modern cinematographic language to talk about the current landscape in Syria. The reincarnation theme allows a playful implementation of fiction and fantasy. The three main characters intimately reflect my experience in the country whether through the general sociopolitical circumstances, daily life or my personal relationship with cinema and filmmaking. “Mosqui Cinema” is an expression of what my generation has gone through but also an attempt to witness what the youth faces today.

Brahim and his family, who are of Moroccan descent, live on the grounds of a crane construction factory in Paris where his father works as caretaker. Every evening, after the plant manager and his employees have left, Brahim and his 13-year-old brother Larbi help their father clean the empty offices. The children suddenly find themselves rulers of an immense kingdom, where their curiosity and imagination run wild. Standing at the end of the factory yard is an old crane and, when night falls, it inspires Brahim’s imagination, working its way into his dreams.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

“Playground Stories” is based on my own memories, both real and imaginary. This film is a journey back to my childhood, through the eyes of little Brahim, my narrative twin. The narrative path follows the meandering route of one’s memories, shaped by a writer’s objectivity, enabling me to push fiction even further. Events take place over a compact period of time, covering a few months in 1981. The realistic or impressionistic transitions that Brahim encounters shape his life. A delicate framework is in play: the dualistic context in which Brahim ‘grows up’ in the playground and in the factory yard.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Brahim Fritah was born in Paris in 1973 and studied at the École Nationale Supérieure des Arts Décoratifs. Straddling the border between several different artistic fields, merging documentary and fiction, he has developed a unique and original style over the years. He has directed “Sweeper’s Chronicles” (1999), “A Woman Alone” (2004), “The Train” (2005) and “The Painting” (2008). These films have been selected for and won prizes at numerous festivals worldwide. In 2003, Brahim took part in the Cannes Film Festival’s Cinéfondation as a writer-in-residence and wrote the screenplay for a feature-length film, “Slimane the Magnificent.”

As I am writing this, I hear in the background of my city the sounds of bullets being fired because our students have just passed the government official tests today. I’m not only thinking about the students but of the random people that may be hit by these same bullets, fired as an act of celebration. These bullets are why I decided to write the story of my film, “Stable Unstable”. The cinema I love is the one that allows you not only to travel to new places but also towards old traditions. The cinema I like to create is the one that revisits traditions and tries to raise questions. The question is: to what extent can cinema change traditions?

STANDSTILL

“Arihote is a Kanienkehaka photographer whose life is at a standstill. When he witnesses the murder of a neighbour, his stagnant existence is unexpectedly revitalised. Instead of calling the police, he finds himself clearing up the crime scene and helping the murderer, Widad, to avoid arrest. As Arihote embarks on a quest to rebuild his relationship with his son and resolve his feelings about his father’s suicide, he tries to figure out why he is allowing his interest in life to be revived by Widad. Their chance encounter may set both men on a new course.”

“Until Morning” is a moving drama set in Beirut, Lebanon. The story chronicles the passage of three couples throughout the city the day before Christmas Eve.

“Until Morning” offers a kaleidoscopic view of the lives of several citizens in Beirut over the course of a single day: a well-to-do couple struggles with the memory of their young son’s tragic death; a disaffected photo-essayist tries to find a way to make a life for himself and his fiancée; and a mechanic pawns his wife’s jewelry to place a risky bet at the racetrack. This film portrays resilient, essentially good people striving to make the best possible lives for themselves while moving in confined circles among the strife and trauma of their daily existence. “Until Morning” is a tale of struggle, recovery and rebirth.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

The idea of this film emerged from making the 2006 documentary “The Place I Call Home”, a story of belonging and immigration. After screening the film around the world I realised that from the day we are born, we are all searching for happiness and chasing personal dreams, no matter where we come from or what we believe. We often struggle when our dreams conflict with the labels that we are given at birth such as gender, nationality and religion. The film is partly inspired by the lives of the real people in the documentary.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Tamer Ezzat is an Egyptian filmmaker who started his career in 1994 as an editor for famed Egyptian directors such as Yousef Chahine’s “Silence... We’re Rolling” and Yousry Nasrallah’s “On Boys, Girls & the Veil, the City”. He went on to study Directing and Special Effects at NYU and NYFA. In 2002, he returned to Cairo to start directing and producing award-winning documentaries including “Everything Is Gonna Be Alright!” and “The Place I Call Home”. His fiction feature debut “The Ring Road”, which he wrote and directed, premiered at the Cairo International Film Festival in 2010. CHALLAT OF TUNIS

“Challatt Tunes”, Tunisia

The story of Challatt, a supposed fundamentalist who slashes women’s buttocks with a razor blade in Tunisia, reveals what urban myths tell us about our society, culture and identity.

Tunis, 2003, a man on a moped, razor blade in hand, prowls the streets. He’s on a mission to slash the most beautiful buttocks of women strolling down the city’s sidewalks. They call him Challat; in Tunisian dialect, the word means blade and is most likely a distortion of Gillette, a famous razor blade brand with the slogan “the best a man can get.” Eight years later and Challat has just been freed from jail, and Tunisian filmmaker Kaouther Ben Hania sets out to find him. She wants to know what motivated him to slash women like herself.

Since 1983, Cinetelefilms has been one of the leading production companies in Tunisia and the Arab World. In 2009 and 2010, it produced more than 20 documentaries and television films for international television channels and short films including the feature film “Laila’s Birthday” directed by award-winning Palestinian filmmaker Rashid Masharawi. “Laila’s Birthday” premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival and was distributed in more than 15 countries. The feature-length documentary “No More Fear” directed by Tunisian director Mourad Ben Cheikh, explores the Tunisian revolution of January 2011. This film was the official selection of the 64th Cannes Film Festival.

Kaouther Ben Hania has studied cinema in both Tunisia and France. She has been based in Paris for the past four years and has recently started working on international films both in fiction and documentary. Her several short films include “Me, My Sister and The Thing” (2006), which had a long and successful run on the international festival circuit. Her last documentary film “Imams Go to School” premiered at IDFA 2010 and was selected in several international film festivals including the Dubai International Film Festival in December 2010. She is now developing with Cinetelefilms her first feature film “La Cité de Plomb”.

As a Tunisian, and as a woman, I want to regain my right to speak out, to say what I think of Challatt, of chauvinism, of misinformation. The myth of Challatt and his popularity is a perfect way to delve into these issues. My sense of humor and natural irony will be my allies, allowing me to address the issues while keeping the tone light and entertaining. In Tunisia, what makes people tick is their sense of irony when faced with serious and suffocating issues. I want my film to represent a Tunisia that knows how to laugh at itself – and hopefully listen.

“Cinema Palestine”, Palestine, Canada, Qatar, 2012

A poetic documentary exploring the emergence of a Palestinian cinema in recent years, and the concepts of land and space in work by Palestinian filmmakers.

This film will focus on the ‘fourth wave’ of Palestinian cinema, running from 1980 to the present and is now considered a significant artistic force in world cinema. Films from this period have screened in major festivals such as Cannes, Berlin, Venice and Toronto, and have received globally renowned awards. Constructed in a series of dialogues in which the filmmakers speak on a series of linked themes, the subjects address their ancestral roots, their relationship to the landscape, the political situation and the concept of a Palestinian ‘national’ cinema.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

From a creative standpoint, “Cinema Palestine” presents an opportunity to combine my interests in the landscape and the culture around exile and diaspora. I strive to create work that has inherent value as an artistic interpretation as well as a historical and critical document of a particular people, moment or movement in history. My area of interest enables me to explore the ideas of land and space through the work of Palestinian filmmakers, while also offering an opportunity for them to interpret and explain their own works - an exploration of an environment and people. The elements of this filmic exploration recognise diverse narrative forms, which become as important as the stories they frame.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Tim Schwab is a Film and Television Production graduate from Montana State University and has an MFA in Cinema Production from Concordia University. He is a producer, director and editor whose films and experimental works have screened at festivals, museums and on television around the world. His many awards include the Documentary Achievement Award from the International Documentary Association for “The Burning Barrel” (1997). His recent work includes the CBC documentary “Being Osama”. He is currently working on a multimedia community art project about the Montreal neighbourhood of NDG and the oral history project “Stories of Montrealers Displaced by War, Genocide and Other Human Rights Abuses”.

COMPANY PROFILE

Phoenix Films is a film production company owned by Majdi El-Omari and registered in Quebec since 1997. The company initially produced films that were directed by the owner, but the organisation is starting to expand its vision and scope of work. Phoenix Films has recently begun to produce work by other filmmakers who share El-Omari’s perspective, and projects that are relevant to the company’s vision of engaging filmmaking. Phoenix Films co-produced “Being with Juliano”, a documentary directed by Emtiaz Diab. The company is also producing Tim Schwab’s film about Palestinian cinema. Other documentaries in the development phase include films exploring the situation of women in Tunisia and in the Palestinian camps in Lebanon.

An ex-militia officer responsible for many casualties in the Lebanese Civil War, comes face-to-face with relatives of the victims of a conflict marked by ethnic and religious brutality. Through these encounters he seeks redemption for his crimes.

Two people irrevocably changed by war come together in “Confession and Struggle,” an unflinching look at the brutal Civil War in Lebanon that took thousands of lives and changed many others. Today, Assaad Shaftari, a former Christian militia leader once known as a killing machine, now seeks redemption. And Maryam Saiidi, a Muslim woman, still struggles to find her son who disappeared 30 years ago during a military operation in relation to Shaftari’s previous militia actions. Will their encounter bring hope, answer questions and provide closure for the wounds of a war fought almost a generation ago?

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I was never convinced by the post-war Lebanese government’s promise of peace and reconciliation between different sects. Since the end of the Civil War I have not noticed any significant change in the mindset of the people of Lebanon. When I read that one of the main figures of the war, Assaad Shaftari, was apologising for his actions. I started to believe that his confession might help build a platform for peace. I thought that making a film about Assad’s confession could have lasting meaning, to help us understand humanity and the consequences of war, not only in Lebanon but throughout the world.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Eliane was born in Lebanon in 1972. She has directed two short fiction films and three documentaries among which “Hayda Lubnan”, a 58 minutes documentary broadcasted on Arte, ZDF, NHK and Al Jadeed TV stations. “Fidaï”, Algeria, France, China, Germany, Qatar

The story of the filmmaker’s great uncle who joined the secret National Liberation Front during the Algerian revolution. It is a revealing account of attempted murder, dark secrets and the settling of scores.

During the war in Algeria, El Hadi, the great uncle of filmmaker Damien Ounouri, joined his sister in France and became an active member of a secret armed group known as the National Liberation Front (FLN). Attempted murder, imprisonment and finally deportation back to Algeria in 1962, define his personal journey and reveals the whole story. Now 69 years old, the film marks the first time El Hadi has revealed this dark chapter of his past.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

As a child, I often questioned my father about the story of his uncle that was revealed through mere footnotes as the elders were veiling this period in silence. My imagination filled in details: he would have been a shadow fighter with a gun to defend a noble cause; would have learned reading and writing in jail. Beyond the family ties, his story leads me to wider concerns – what history remembers from wars is often not what has been experienced by its participants. Through his example and the Mujahideen he knew, I wanted to depict the experience of these workers-soldiers.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Damien Ounouri was born in Clermont-Ferrand, France in 1982 to a French mother and Algerian father. He studied film theory at Sorbonne University, while developing his cinema practice with independent filmmakers group, Li Hua Films. His first documentary “Xiao Jia Going Home” was about sixth generation Chinese filmmaker Jia Zhang-Ke. “I Wish I Knew” (2010) screened at many festivals around the world. He has directed several short films and documentaries including “Changping”, “Sonata in a Small Chinese Town” (2007) and “Away from Nedjma” (2009). He is also a tutor, conducting cinema workshops for children and teenagers in Algeria and France.

The filmmaker’s father spent 40 years of his life as the founder and director of a secular school in Beirut’s southern suburbs, once a mixed area but now predominately Shi’a and a Hezbollah stronghold. Today, the 69-year-old founder is drowning in debt and must sell his school. He is devastated. His wife, however, sees selling the school as a relief. The filmmaker returns to her homeland to document this painful period in their lives and in the life of the country.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Only by cobbled together a tale of many individual stories, as different as they may be, can the collective history of the country be told. With the story of my family, both unique and commonplace, I strive to examine the complexity of the situation in Lebanon with all its contradictions, as well as transformations in the physical landscape of the country and the mental outlook of the people which are the result of years of war and political crisis. The period after the war in Lebanon was marked by a collective amnesia which can only be shaken through the telling of as many stories as possible. I am confident that these stories, like those of my family in their palpable unease, will finally defeat the country’s tendency to forget.

THE MAGHREBLACK

“Les Maghrebim”, Morocco, France, Palestine, Italy, Qatar, 2012

A rediscovery of his parents’ archival images led Ivan Boccara to question his roots, his identity and the identity of the whole population who left Morocco almost 40 years ago.

The director returns to the roots of his family’s history, starting from footage his parents filmed 40 years ago depicting the Jewish population in Ntifa, a village in the Grand Atlas Mountains in Morocco. He revisits the village where he meets the few remaining Jews and also visits those who left almost 40 years ago to go to France and Israel. He explores the role that the Jewish Agency played in convincing people to leave their country to immigrate to Israel. Do they still remember Ntifa? What relationship do they have today with their roots?

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I endeavoured to capture the story about a place that is gradually abandoned by the Jewish community. Through this process of storytelling, I seek to understand the motivations and emotions behind the departure or migration of these unique people. Since I have lived in various countries, a personal and global perspective colours the film which has become an exploration of my own multidimensional cultural voice. The process of filmmaking allowed me to distil these particular stories and to perpetuate this narrative in the realm of memory.

MOHAMMAD SAVED FROM THE WATERS

“Mohammad Saved from the Waters,” Egypt, France, Qatar

The story of the filmmaker’s brother who lost his life to kidney failure. The narrative engages in an exploration of the body, tradition, religion and family in modern Egypt confronted with the most rapid changes in its 5,000 year history.

After six years of dialysis and because he refused to accept a transplant, my brother Mohammad died. His kidneys failed because of water. The Nile is sick – 52 canals dump human and industrial waste destroying fish, flora and, above all, human kidneys. Mohamad believed a donor’s body wasn’t his to sell, that it belongs to God. In Egypt, many believe the same yet organ trafficking is widespread, lucrative and prohibitive laws are largely ignored. The story of Mohammad explores body, tradition, religion and family in a country confronted with the most rapid changes in its 5,000 year history.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Many Egyptian villages drink polluted water, the Nile is polluted, the air thick with car fumes and factories dump waste in the river. Industrialised agriculture uses unauthorised insecticides, causing food poisoning. Kidney failure is so common that dialysis units are installed across the country. I lost my brother to kidney failure and worry about my family, friends and fellow citizens. What can I do? I make films. Usually, I make them about less topical, less urgent subjects. Here, I am trying to contribute to the safety of my country, to raise the issue of growth and pollution in a sensitive and emotional manner.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Safaa Fathy was born in Minia, Upper Egypt in 1958. She is the director of many films, including “D’Ailleurs” and “Derrida.” Inspired by her film, she then co-wrote with Jacques Derrida, one of the most studied of French philosophers, “Tourner les mots;” and “Au bord d’un film.” She has also been author to many poetry collections in Arabic and has staged a dozen theatre plays.

MY LOVE AWAITS ME
BY THE SEA

“Habibi Bestanani 3ind Al Bahar”, Jordan, Palestine, Qatar, 2012

A woman takes a journey back to Palestine. She meets Hasan, her imaginary lover, and through his fantasy world finds the remnants of hope in characters living a harsh reality.

A personal journey that the director embarks upon after discovering the work of artist Hasan Houran. It is the story of a girl who travels back to her homeland looking for her imaginary lover by the sea, meeting on the way people who carry on his legacy. This film pays tribute to an artist whose work is known for its imaginative simplicity; giving a sense of hope to a generation struggling to avoid the numbness imposed on it by the current political and social realities.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

This film pays tribute to an artist’s work that has grown in popularity for its imaginative simplicity, which has fostered hope and a belief in a dream greater than oneself. The film also attempts to manifest the artist’s effort to encapsulate the emotional state of the current generation, and its struggle to disrupt the numbness induced by various social and political realities.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Mais Darwazah began her independent film career by making short experimental films. She received a British Council scholarship and completed an MA in Documentary Directing. Her 2008 graduation film, “Take Me Home”, screened in numerous international festivals. “My Love Awaits Me by the Sea” is Mais’s first feature-length documentary: it has participated at the Berlinale’s DocStation (2009) and was granted the Sundance Documentary Fund (2010) and the Sanad Development Fund (2011).

COMPANY PROFILE

NOTES ON A TUNISIAN ODYSSEY

“Notes on a Tunisian Odyssey”, France, Tunisia, USA

An exploration of Tunisia’s false memories and those that created them, with a view toward its future visions of itself.

Examining the culture and history of Tunisia and how it has been mediated or ignored by the Western lens, the film follows the events of January 2011 which culminated in the toppling of President Ben Ali. The film looks both backward and forward from this point of inspiration for pro-democracy revolutionary movements worldwide. Kays Mejri and Matt Peterson use distinct approaches to collaborate on a documentary that is part essayistic ethnography, political portrait and a touristic travelogue.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Our work focuses on experience, the experience of place, history, and memory, and the collective processes, that shape our subjectivities. In examining these processes of understanding, we can re-teach ourselves new forms of relations and from there envision and actualise new ways of living. We work with encounters, critical encounters with the locations and moments of forgotten histories, and spontaneous encounters with those who wish for something else. For us, Tunisia represents an exciting space to enter into, with a people who wish to begin again.

DIRECTORS’ BIOGRAPHY

Matt Peterson is an archivist, curator, and writer based in New York City. He has produced seven short videos which have been screened on television, as well as at community gardens, cultural centres, galleries, microcinemas, museums, and theatres throughout the United States. He is a member of Red Channels, a radical collective of cultural workers.

Thameur Mejri is a Tunisian filmmaker, currently based in Montreal. As a director, he has worked with his brother to create four short films which have won awards at festivals in New York, Los Angeles, Damascus, Sicily and Tunis. As a co-director and first assistant, he has worked on a number of film and television productions, including the short film “Perversion” (2006), which screened at Cannes, Carthage, Melbourne, and Montpellier. He also co-produced the documentary feature film, “The Unreturned” (2010), about Iraqi refugees in Jordan and Syria, which played at the Full Frame and Human Rights Watch Film Festival.

Sama, a 25-year-old woman of Egyptian origin raised in Italy, has just graduated in Political Science. She decides to wear the veil with pride while aware of the repercussions that may entail in Italy. She plans a trip to Egypt to deepen her knowledge of the role of women in Islamic countries. There, Sama will film women involved in politics, communications, welfare and who serve in the Muslim Brotherhood movement. She explores how women in Islamic contexts can have important roles in society.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Through this documentary film, I am attempting to understand elements of the Muslim Brotherhood movement, and the possibility of Islamisation in Egypt after the fall of the Mubarak regime. I feel that the evolution and growth of the Muslim Brotherhood should utilise the perspectives of women, as they could represent a unique shift for the movement. Today, the ‘sisters’ work primarily in charity organisations and generally do not achieve leadership positions inside the movement or in politics. However, this film aims to represent the changing face of Egypt’s socio-political landscape.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

After working in Milan as an editor in film and at Rai Television, Carolina Popolani moved to Rome where she worked for 13 years as Senior Editor and Producer for the Arab satellite channel, Television Orbit. GRANDMA

“Teta”, Lebanon, Qatar, 2011

A story about family, faith and the genuine miracles that change our hearts and minds.

Sarah is a teenager living with her grandmother Marta and younger sister in Byblos, Lebanon. Stigmatised by their community because Sarah’s mother has left, the family’s life is turned upside down when a Virgin Mary in Marta’s shrine starts leaking oil – it’s a miracle. Marta becomes the centre of attention in town, while Sarah’s skepticism strains their already fragile relationship. “Grandma” is a universal story about faith, family and true miracles that change hearts and minds.
Jad (1988) grew up in Amchit, Lebanon. As a kid, he loved showbiz and started performing to his friends and family. At age 17, he discovered the audio-visual field of study, instantly fell in love and chose it as a major. In 2007, he joined the Visual Arts faculty at the Holy Spirit University in Kaslik, Lebanon, and his passion for movies and filmmaking continues to grow. Jad met Merva in 2007 and the two started a partnership which resulted in their collaboration on “Teta”. He recently wrote and directed his film “In Loving Memory” and has worked in the camera department on the feature film “Tannoura Maxi” (2011).

Merva Faddoul grew up in Byblos, Lebanon, with four siblings and a wild imagination. She has a BA in Communications from the Lebanese American University and an MFA in Film Production from the University of Southern California. Her documentary “T for Middle Eastern” played at several international festivals including the Short Film Corner at the Cannes Film Festival, Annual Arab Film Festival in San Francisco and the Human Rights Nights in Bologna. In addition, her fiction script “Teta” has won National Geographic’s All Roads Seed Grant. She is currently in development on several feature projects including “Lebanese Beauty” and “Hummus Wars.”

For as long as I can remember I’ve built worlds, characters and stories in my mind. At age 13, I stood as a clueless kid on my balcony in Byblos, Lebanon, declaring my dream of becoming a filmmaker to my friends. Seventeen years later, I returned to the same location and shot “Teta” (Grandma). Equipped with funding from the Doha Film Institute and National Geographic All Roads Film Project along with an MFA from the University of Southern California and a dozen trials and triumphs in films; I couldn’t help but notice that 13-year-old smiling back at me from the same balcony.

HANEEN

“Haneen”, Palestine, Jordan

A story about nostalgia, loneliness, and the absence of love. Haneen is an old woman surviving within the memories of her home, struggling between slow monotony and her passion to rediscover life.

Haneen, a woman in her mid-60s, lives alone in a Palestinian city estranged from her husband and son. The municipal authorities arrive on her street and hang uniform plastic numbers on all the houses. With her usual determination, Haneen removes her number. After befriending Salem, a new boy in the neighbourhood who steals oranges from her garden, their relationship deepens when the Army arrests his father. The authorities return with a new number and re-affix it to Haneen’s house. She lives her past and present in solitude and nostalgia waiting for unanswered letters to be returned.

Philistine Films is an independent production company founded in 1997. Based in Jordan and Palestine, Philistine Films was created to support new voices and to offer a platform for the emerging independent Arab film scene. Our company goal is to focus on development and co-production of independent feature and documentary films and find unconventional stories and fresh narratives. We hope to challenge the creative, financial, and practical obstacles confronting filmmakers working outside the mainstream.

Ossama Bawardi is a filmmaker based in Palestine and Jordan. He has been involved in various Palestinian productions including “Paradise Now” and Annemarie Jacir’s “Salt of this Sea.” He has participated in the Tribeca Film Festival’s All Access Programme and has been invited to speak on several panels on film production in the Middle East, and alongside Michael Moore at the Traverse City Film Festival. Ossama directed a short art video that combined dance and music that was shown at the Ramallah Modern Dance Festival. He is currently producing Annemarie Jacir’s feature “When I Saw You”.

Every name in Arabic has a meaning. “Haneen” means nostalgia. For me, the meanings are endless, hanging somewhere between that place where everything is left to the formations of a new memory. It keeps you alive, full of hope, and it slowly kills you, pulling you away from a reality. Waiting for memories to come back takes many forms. Space creates consciousness and so Haneen lives in slowness with all the details that fill her time. I tried to make an intimate portrait that somehow reveals the loneliness of human beings and the worlds they build around them.

Souad and her neighbours’ hearts go out to the people who live around the block, victims of the Sabra and Chatila refugee camp massacre. Yet, when a rumor begins that another massacre is being committed in the camp, hundreds of refugees flee to her neighbourhood seeking refuge. Souad and her neighbours make sure that none of the refugees find shelter in their homes. Inspired by real life events, “Rumors” is a short fiction about how war and fear can strip us of our humanity.

Genre: Based on a True Story, Drama
Language: Arabic
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Set during the aftermath of a massacre, “Rumors” is a film about the witnesses of the horrific event, rather than the victims. The witnesses are burdened by what they see and what they know. Their fear strips them of their humanity. In many ways they are you and I, sitting in a cinema watching the film.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Azza El-Hassan has won several international film awards; her films have been shown on television networks such as the BBC, ARTE, YLE, MBC and in international festivals around the world including Japan’s Yamagata, IDFA in The Netherlands and Germany’s Leipzig. She won the 2006 Luchino Visconti Award, 2002 Grierson Award and the 2001 Jury Award at Arab Screen Independent Film Festival. Azza’s recent latest fiction feature “Musical Chairs” is in pre-production and has received the 2010 Torino Film Lab Production Award, 2009 Development Award at the Berlinale Talent Co-Production Market and 2008 Carthage Film Festival Script Award.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

The film is a story of a couple trying to survive after the death of their son. Everything is communicated with silence through the exchange of glances, gestures and shifting environments. The places in the film reflect the interior of the characters’ mental and emotional landscape. The film explores rebirth in the wake of failure and loss.

In the eastern region of the Beirut suburbs, the filmmaker’s family used to hide in Mary’s house, known to be the safest house in the neighbourhood. It became that way thanks to the living room wall that was built with reinforced concrete and which, according to the owner, was indestructible. Twenty years after the end of the war, Mary’s son, George, decides to break down the wall. The idea of losing it and everything that it represents leads the filmmaker to create a series of interviews with people who lived at Mary’s place during that period.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

This film has already haunted me for 10 years. And then, one day, “The Wall” was brought to life. It was a necessity for me- an emergency, because I want to remember, at all cost. Remember everything: the good and the bad; war and love. I want to let the people who influenced my childhood speak; say that everything has not gone to waste; that we have learned, immortalising a world that means a lot to me. Some would say one wall less, so what? But what about the walls we wrap ourselves in?

How do you come home when everything has changed?
The story of an inner adventure through legends and lies of a young woman in search of her identity in contemporary Lebanon.

Nada, a young ballet dancer, leaves Paris and returns for the first time to Lebanon, the country she left when she was a child. She redisCOVERS her abandoned family house partially destroyed by bombing and the garden turned into a garbage dump. She dECides to settle in this place full of childhood memories and sets herself a mission: to find the body of her grandfather who vanished during the Civil War. Her quest takes her the length and breadth of Lebanon, through legends and secrets - an inner adventure for a young woman in search of her identity.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

My general approach to the film is sensual, as the character’s relationship with identity unfolds in a specific place, with its light, nature and skins. I also want to make the audience feel the invisible presences that haunt Nada: the barbarism of the old Civil War beneath the surface of contemporary Lebanon; and the family as a body tormented by ghosts born of silence and secrets. Despite the hidden horror, a certain fantasy and lightness is present in the tone, as Nada experiences her journey of self-discovery while traveling with her brother in the freedom of childhood.

THE EYE OF THE DEVIL

“Ayn al-Shaytan”, Iraq, Lebanon, Qatar

In a remote village in Iraq in 1988, a housewife is hiding her brother in her house. Then one day her husband comes home from the war.

Iraq, 1988. In a small village on the outskirts of the desert, Hana is hiding her brother in her house. Outside, the Iran-Iraq war is raging and Saddam Hussein’s tyrannical regime is sowing fear among the people. Hunted down by security agents, Jawad, who deserted, has shut himself away in a tiny room in his sister’s house. A courageous wife and mother, Hana puts herself at risk to feed him daily while also taking care of her two kids and trying to cope with social hardship. But one day Hana’s husband comes back from the war and the family’s precarious situation soon becomes unbearable.

“The Eye of the Devil” is a ‘film about war’ without being a ‘war film’. In the story, which unfolds almost completely inside a single house, war is a backdrop, a mood, a background noise, but it’s never directly shown. I’m much more interested in its pervasive effects on individuals - the way it distorts the human mind and body, and how, in the long term, it slips under one’s skin and becomes like second nature. Another self. In this film, there is no good and evil, no heroes - only people trying to survive, at any cost.

A Lebanese-Canadian filmmaker, Katia Jarjoura directed several documentaries in the Middle East, (“Caught in Between”, “The Road to Kerbala”, “Goodbye Mubarak!”) which have been screened worldwide and broadcast on various international channels, including ARTE, Al Jazeera and CBC. Her work focuses on war-torn countries like Iraq, Iran, Palestine and Lebanon, portraying people caught in the midst of political turmoil. In the last few years, Katia has moved into fiction, writing screenplays and directing her first short film, “In their Blood”, which won the France 2 Award at the Brest Film Festival. “The Eye of the Devil” will be her first feature film.

Founded in 1988 by two young French producers, Emmanuel Agneray and Jérôme Bleitrach, Bizibi Production has produced several short films and features which have been internationally renowned and critically acclaimed. Its producers have a strong interest in the Middle East and have supported such emerging filmmakers from the region as Syrian director Meyar al-Roumi (“Rehleh”) and Lebanese filmmaker Hany Tamba (“Beyrouth After Shave”), winner of a César for Best Short film. The company’s debut feature, “Or mon trésor”, won the Caméra d’Or at the Cannes Film Festival in 2004. The duo have numerous feature projects in development, including “The Eye of the Devil”.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE
I always wanted to make a movie in a French suburb, and I was looking for the story I was going to fall in love with. I do not want to give a simplistic view showing burning cars and hooded violent youths. There is no doubt that this violence exists but I also want to show the poetry and the immense desire to live that blooms in the suburbs; a world where characters are often funny, engaging, creative and very human.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY
Hicham Ayouch is a Moroccan filmmaker born in 1976. A former journalist, he worked with several French channels before becoming a writer and director. His first two features were documentaries: “The King’s Queens” about the status of the women in Morocco and “Angel’s Dust” about autistic teenagers. He has also directed two shorts “Bombillywood” and “As They Say”. His first fiction feature “Heart Edges” about a dead fishing village was recently followed up with “Cracks”, a love triangle between three misfits in Tangiers. He is in development with two fiction features: “Samba Do Maaouz”, a satirical tale set in Morocco and “Fevers”.

A GAZA WEEKEND

“Osboo’ Ghazaawi”, Palestine, Germany, Qatar

Israel’s borders are sealed off due to an epidemic of a new virus and Gaza offers the only escape to freedom.

Waleed runs an unlicensed DVD shop in Gaza, and in a botched business deal he loses a small fortune; his wife’s jewellery. Meanwhile the breakout of a rampant virus in Israel forces the international community to quarantine the country and cut it off from the rest of the world by land, air and sea. Waleed undertakes a fast cash job smuggling an Israeli family into Gaza, then onto a boat departing from the port, but complications arise when the boat is delayed and Waleed must hide the Israeli family in the basement of his own crowded house.

I am a strong believer in thought provoking and entertaining films. A light-hearted story set in a fictional contemporary period would present the world with something new and refreshing, a comedy with a heart, coming from Gaza. I plan to tell a story where the characters’ human side shines through the absurd world they live in. In times of hardship and despair, there will always be people who will put their differences and personal gain aside. This is Waleed’s story, an unlucky man, who gets stuck with a bunch of unwanted guests he learns to love.

Basil Khalil was born and raised in Nazareth to a Palestinian father and English-Irish mother. After graduating from Screen Academy Scotland in Edinburgh with an MA in Producing and Script Development, he produced a number of short films and a feature documentary “Replay Revenge”. He currently lives and works in London as a television freelancer and has co-written a television series for Al Jazeera children’s channel. “A Gaza Weekend” is his first feature fiction screenplay; with it he has taken part in the Torino Film Lab and Rawi Writer’s lab in consultation with the Sundance Institute.

In “Housekeeping”, I continue to look at the mechanics of the hidden tensions in family structures, which I began to articulate through the play of silence and angst between two brothers in my first short film “Cadillac Blues.” In “Housekeeping”, I will be looking at a bigger picture. My intention is to look at those tensions, portrayed through warm interactions amongst a cast of lively, even feisty characters. The film proceeds on three parallel levels: the internal, the external, and the social paradigm, which translate in the movie as three levels: a dream world, Farida’s world, and the media construct.

NOSTALGIA

“Nostalgia,” Jordan, USA, Qatar

An unforgiving neighbourhood, four sisters, and nostalgia that will make dreams come true.

After a lifetime of suppressing traditions in a tough neighborhood in Amman, Zainab – 45, veiled and single – receives a note that could change her life forever. While deciding whether to break free, her father suddenly disappears. At the old family bookshop, a place full of memories of older traditions, Zainab reunites with her three younger sisters to enlist their help. The sisters are now completely different, socially and religiously, creating the perfect formula for disaster. Not until combining forces, will they be able to find their father. But now that Zainab can choose, will she seize her freedom?

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

I want to tell a story about people whose lives are dictated by culture, tradition and the need to be socially accepted, a force, which can be destructive at times. I also want to reflect the fun loving and humorous nature of the Jordanian people that comes forth even in difficult times. “Nostalgia” concentrates on the struggles of women with dreams in Jordan. I see “Nostalgia” as an empowering film for women that will enchant both International and Arab audiences.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Acting since he was five, and introduced to the world of storytelling through Sinbad and Superman, Zaid holds a BA in Communication Arts from Lebanese American University and an MFA in Filmmaking from NY Film Academy. ON THE IDENTITY OF SHIDYAQ

“Fi Ma Huwa al Faryaq,” Lebanon, France, Qatar

Omar, Reem and a puppet are stuck in a house haunted by the 19th century intellectual, Ahmad Fares Al Shidyaq.

In an old crumbling house, Omar is terrified of the outside and Reem is passing through and needs to remain invisible. Omar spends his days writing about Ahmad Faris Al-Shidyaq; an Arab intellectual from the 19th century. Shidyaq was a linguist, a translator, a newspaper editor, a cynical chronicler of his time, and an amateur musician enamoured with women. Reem interferes in Omar’s world of imagination. In the midst of this uncanny atmosphere, a puppet that has developed a life of its own and joins them.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Cinema and animation are the means to live the fantastic in everyday life. My work has always taken as its base different historical and sociological phenomena of the Arab world and then sought to transmute these phenomena into dreamlike atmospheres. I began my professional life as a historical researcher, and it was then, 10 years ago, that Ahmad Fares Al Shidyaq, this expansive Arab intellectual and lover of life, captured my imagination. A compulsion to, one day, bring this thinker back to life began.

Ahmad, 26, is the best mechanic in the mountains of Lebanon. The only car he hasn’t had time and courage to fix yet is his father’s Peugeot from 1984; the year his dad was killed. When the July War breaks out, Ahmad finds the chance he’s always waited for. Amidst the ongoing chaos, the refusal of his mother and the sarcasm of his sister, he slowly starts transforming the bullet ridden rusty car into his wedding ride. But as days pass by and the car gradually comes back to life, dark events ensue and deep wounds surface.

SHADOW OF A MAN

“Salaman ya Abi”, Lebanon, Qatar

With his wedding approaching, Ahmad attempts to lead a normal life, but the 2006 summer war in Lebanon forces him to confront a dark secret that may jeopardise his future.

Ahmad, 26, is the best mechanic in the mountains of Lebanon. The only car he hasn’t had time and courage to fix yet is his father’s Peugeot from 1984; the year his dad was killed. When the July War breaks out, Ahmad finds the chance he’s always waited for. Amidst the ongoing chaos, the refusal of his mother and the sarcasm of his sister, he slowly starts transforming the bullet ridden rusty car into his wedding ride. But as days pass by and the car gradually comes back to life, dark events ensue and deep wounds surface.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

“Shadow of a Man” is a very personal story about a character who witnesses civil war as a child and keeps it in his unconscious until another war comes to awaken the memory. It is a story about home, love, loss, courage and redemption. It is the story of every Lebanese. And it is, above all, the story of each and every person who has an unsettled conflict in their life, internal or external. The setting of the film is very specific, but the characters’ plot points and themes will make it easy for universal audiences to identify with it.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Niam Itani was born in 1980 and is a Lebanese filmmaker with a decade of experience in television production and documentary filmmaking. She holds a MFA in Screenwriting and currently teaches scriptwriting at the Lebanese American University in Beirut. Niam has written four feature scripts. Her short narrative “Super.Full.” is due to premiere at the Seattle International Film Festival in May 2011. “Shadow of a Man” is her debut feature.

The Belmakis, an upper-middle-class family in France, appear to lead a trouble-free life; however, all is not as it seems. Ahmed, the patriarch, harbours a secret past as a Harki (an Algerian who served on the French side during the Algerian war). His French wife, Françoise, is lonely and depressed. Tarek, their son, still lives at home and has yet to find himself. And daughter Sofia, a law student, has no interest in her Algerian heritage. But Ahmed dies in an accident while driving home. As the family prepares for his funeral, they hear a knocking from inside the coffin. Ahmed emerges alive with a clear purpose: to travel back to Algeria.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Questions of how one relates to one’s cultures and its landscape, and how they foster our identity - are both concepts central to my work. My second concern is exploring the role of family and collective history, and their ability to shape our sense of identity.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

After spending his childhood in Algeria, Brazil, Haiti and Senegal, Karim Bensalah studied social sciences and philosophy in France. He later attended the London Film School, where he directed the short films “Constant Flow” and “Fatima’s Secret.” In 2005, he directed a segment of the feature film “Paris La Métisse” along with 15 other young directors. He has also directed short films with the Collectif Tribudom, and created his own installation work. He recently completed “Chibanis,” a documentary about Arab workers in France, and attended the 2010 RAWI Screenwriters lab in Jordan and the June 2011 Sundance Screenwriters lab.

New York-based Imam Omar Metwally develops an unlikely friendship with a homeless teenager who sleeps outside his mosque. When the boy asks Omar for spiritual solace after a fatal stabbing, Omar provides him with the Muslim creed of faith and then a Muslim burial. But then the boy’s estranged parents show up demanding their son be given a Christian burial and Omar refuses. The ensuing political scandal threatens Omar’s job, his faith and the relationship he’d just started building with his young daughters. Confronted with the possibility of losing his daughters, Omar is forced to choose between his mosque duties, his Muslim ideals, and his bond with his daughters.
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

This film is not meant to be a love letter to Arabs or to Islam, though there is tenderness for both. It is the story of one person’s messy struggle to be a good man and a good father. I wanted to see what it was like for him to do what he believes is right, only to have it blow up in his face and force him to re-examine his beliefs.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Faiza Ambah is one of the first female Saudi journalists to work as a reporter for Arab News in the late 1980s. She collaborated with Associated Press in the UAE, The Christian Science Monitor and, in 2006, began working as a correspondent for The Washington Post’s Foreign Service in Saudi Arabia. In 2009, she decided to focus on filmmaking and recently completed a summer programme at the USC School of Cinematic Arts. DIRECTOR’S NOTE

During the July 2006 war, I was in the South of Lebanon waiting for ceasefires to take an exceptional snapshot. I saw the destroyed houses and the bodies left in the streets. I felt disgusted. I was ashamed of myself. The same words kept repeating themselves over and over in my head: Why am I shooting? Would it be possible to transmit the odour I smell through my shots? I then realised that taking pictures was a reflex, a way for me to react towards what was going on. But then I felt photography wasn’t enough anymore.

WINDOW

“Ashubbak”, Iraq, Qatar

A young couple from different backgrounds are hiding in a room in Baghdad. The husband wants to leave the country and is prepared to sell his kidney to achieve his dream.

Kaddouri and Fatima, a young married couple from different backgrounds, are hiding in a room in Baghdad to escape death and confrontation with their respective families. The window of the room becomes a character in the film. For Fatima, even this hell is heaven, but Kaddouri is desperate to leave. One day, Kaddouri comes back, he has a large scar on his side; Fatima doesn’t know what caused it. Later on, she discovers he sold his kidney to finance the trip. Then comes a call about his younger brother being kidnapped, and the money goes to save the brother’s life. Now it is her turn to help Kaddouri realise his dream.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

My film explores the relationship between newly-weds who are subjected to the pressure of being confined in a room that appears to be a refuge, but turns into a prison. I examine how they adapt, and their attempts to escape the prison of their room and their country. One character is ready for anything, even resorting to selling his kidney, while the other is happy to accept the situation. Working with people who had similar experiences and who had never acted before allowed me to run workshops and create the right atmosphere. Using a digital format enabled me to shoot the film in chronological order, providing more room for improvisation, thus fostering a more realistic outcome.

DIRECTOR’S BIOGRAPHY

Koutaiba Al-Janabi was born in Baghdad where he worked as a photo journalist after attending photography school in Budapest. In 1983 he studied at the Academy of Film and Drama in Hungary, under Lajos Koltai, the Oscar® winning filmmaker. His final project was on Palestinian camps in the 1980s and his PhD thesis was about film aesthetics in Arab cinema. Koutaiba subsequently worked as a cinematographer and started to produce and direct his own projects.

X KIDS

“Nés Sous X” Algeria, Qatar, 2015

Based on a true story, “X Kids” follows the stories of two single mothers, Zohra and Houria.

X kids are children born in Algeria out of wedlock, or as a result of incest, rape or terrorist marriages. They hold no family name, but instead have a first name followed by the letter X. As these children are not socially recognised by the state, they cannot go to school, travel, work or even get married. The stories of these two women are a portrait of two different decades in Algeria: the 1970s, during the socialist regime; and the 1990s, at the time of Islamic fundamentalism. Both women refuse to punish their children for a sin they never committed and struggle against all odds to find a solution.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

“X Kids” is a drama and thriller based on the true stories of single mothers in Algeria. I came across the story on one of my visits to Algiers, when I met a struggling young female X kid called Lamia. I tried to help her get a job but, to my surprise, Lamia was not allowed to work or open a bank account because she had no legal or social identity. I went to the authorities to investigate, and they explained she was an ‘X kid’ and is not recognized in the system. In an attempt to understand her lack of identity, I discovered more X kids from various backgrounds. This is their story.

ASPHALT

“Asphalt,” Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, UAE, Qatar

Loaded 18-wheel truck drivers on a journey across the Middle East contemplate their life, work and the people they have left behind. Asphalt is a journey exploring trucking culture in the Middle East.

Long distance truck drivers spend more time on never-ending, dusty roads between Arab countries than at home. On the road, days and nights merge into one and time is transformed into a distance to be crossed with the sole aim of delivering goods and earning a living. Following three long distance truck drivers on the road between Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and the GCC countries, the film delves into their work and their homes to examine the lives, relationships and families left behind and whether absence ever becomes the norm.

Every year my family journeyed from our home in Kuwait through Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria until reaching Lebanon. Scores of travelling trucks passed us in the comfort of our air-conditioned car as we crossed the vast desert, made rest-stops and found lodging in small towns as night fell. The visuals lingered with me and raised questions about the constant dislocation and loneliness experienced by truck drivers who set out to transport goods from one place to another to keep our economy thriving. The film is currently in the research and development stage covering the trucking industry, routes and locations, and finding the central characters.

Dona Cesaria

“Dona Cesaria”, Lebanon

The goal is to make a film about Césaria Evora, the famous African famous singer, her capital Mindelo, and the history of Cape Verde through her music; an island where two-thirds of its population are exiled.

Césaria Evora is an internationally renowned singer whose voice rings with the culture, ambience and history of “her” capital Mindelo on Cape Verde, nine islands between desert and ocean, chained to exile and whose singing and music constitute the strongest emotional testaments. To understand her, one must understand the lyrics of her music and her life in Mindelo, where she remained for a long time watching others across the sea, until the day came when she had to leave. Although a travelling lifestyle was required by her profession, she always returned to her island.

DIRECTOR’S NOTE

In 1995, a producer from Cape Verde contacted me to offer me the opportunity to make a film about Césaria Evora, The Barefoot Diva. The only condition was that she had to get along with me, and agree to make the movie together. After we met in Paris, she poured a large glass of cognac and said, “Saoud” (Cheers). I had passed the test. I spent time in Cape Verde where I bathed in poetry, nostalgia and their Portuguese-inspired blues music and shot footage of daily life on the island. Fifteen years later, I came across my footage and was inspired to revive the project.

I hate the bled! When I was young, every summer, going to Algeria, I couldn’t do anything without my older brothers, who were treated like kings while I was the ‘under-woman’. My aunt told me once: “You like freedom too much.” What could that have meant? Algerians aren’t free? My aunt isn’t free? Guys leaning up against a wall, no job, nothing to do all day: I hated going to the bled because I hated their lives. In Algeria, people live on hope and regrets. What can the future be, trapped between nothing to expect and nothing to live for?
DIRECTOR’S NOTE

Algeria is a waiting room, and a place of contradictions, too. It’s a room full of people – men and women, sick or not. Some are there by chance, by mistake, still waiting for an answer that will satisfy them – or not. Tomorrow is far away: what are they doing today? They are practicing the future tense. I want to stay in the present for a while, to film this waiting now. What is the future between a rock and a hard place? I want to change the frame. And me in all of this: what am I waiting for?

“7 KM – Sabaa Kilometer”, Algeria, Qatar, 2012

Two children are threatened by a terrorist during the Civil War in Algeria.

1992, somewhere in Algeria. Omar and Othman, two boys from the same poor village, walk 7 km every day to school. That day, on the way home, they are attracted by an unusual sound: the director of their school is summarily executed. The killer sees the kids; they run away.

Preparing food is a moment of sharing, warmth and security. But soon we discover that these young people are like laboratory mice in a glass case.
